

The Tipping Point - Australia in the Balance over Same Gender Relationships

Introduction

Australia is entangled in a social predicament that by its very nature has deep and serious consequential repercussions that will impact nearly every level of our society as we currently know it.

Not since Federation has the nation's morality been placed under a real threat from having its core values undermined in how we traditionally have protected our basic family unit, our youth and our children.

This article explores the country's constitutional obligation to the people of Australia that guarantees them the ability to rely on the blessings from God in the performance of the Constitution of the Federation. It identifies that same gender relationships are contrary to God's will and questions if the Government has the Constitutional power to legislate for moral change knowing that it is in contravention of the undergirding guarantee for a reliance on God's blessing of it.

Geoff Rooke