Alien Spacecraft at Work – The Telegraph 10th March 2017

It never ceases to amaze me that intelligent humans in a professional capacity can dish up so much drivel to the public and there is nary a whimper from the billions of other intelligent humans just standing there letting it be bucketed over them. What is wrong with the general societal view that it sits like a rotting potato at the back of the cupboard, or the packet of oat meal porridge in the pantry that is full of weevils. We need to understand what is happening here and next we need to realise that we don't have to just sit still and let it. We can actually animate ourselves and shake off this dross and say "Enough is enough!"

And I can see that you are now thinking, "What is this poor sod talking about?" And you would be correct in thinking I am having a whinge – besides it is raining outside.

You might gather from the title that this has something to do with that baseless, factless and fictional idea that there are aliens under every cabbage plant. Perhaps it is the storks that deliver them now we know that they don't really deliver human babies like this.

I am talking about wannabe (real) scientists who are searching for fame and notoriety, probably linked to getting their next funding grant, so they roll out that very-very old chestnut – they have discovered aliens. Well there it is. Apparently a decade ago Science detected (not discovered) fast radio bursts coming from deep space. These bursts have a very short frequency of about one millisecond but are very intense and emanate from a region of "remote galaxies billions of light years away".

And so when these "enlightened academics" studied these bursts they said to themselves, "These are aliens". Well of course they did. That's apparently what you immediately think when you are an astrophysicist and see a flash of light in the night sky.

"Well of course they are aliens! What else could they be – a natural phenomenon or Perhaps a new type of star or a galactic collision? Don't be silly!"

"Hush your mouth child!" "Never-never say the bleeding obvious when science is on the hunt for funding."

The facts about this case are that the distance over which these bursts are radiating is beyond human concept to even begin to speculate within the realms of any sort of mature thought. Think about this. If we use this as an example of a light source 5 billion light years away in deep space the distance from Earth is 29.3 billion-trillion miles and, if we sent our fastest rocket ever (New Horizons Probe 2006) to search for the light source it would take -----wait for it -----93 trillion years to get there. This is more crazy stuff the likes of which calls into question why we are spending multiple trillions of dollars on deep space research when a great portion of the population of the Earth are starving, have no water, have no proper toilets, suffer an infant mortality rate of over 150 in 1,000 babies under one year old and live literally hand-to-mouth on a daily basis. It is grotesque.

These flashing light burst events occurred at their origin billions of years ago, and given that planet Earth is only 4 billion years old, these events precede the existence of our solar system and reach back to when the universe was obviously still in a flux condition. Is it possible that we are seeing evidence of colliding galaxies? Absolutely and unequivocally YES! Is it possible that we are seeing latent evidence of the stars in the deep outer regions still in their formative stage and are ejecting satellite bodies the size of planets as they seek equilibrium in a localised solar system. Once again, absolutely Yes!

Well now what do we think about the assertion by these wonderful scientists that, “They say the FRB’s could be evidence of aliens hard at work and that the bursts may be leaked energy from unimaginable powerful transmitters capable of sending giant light sail ships on voyages between stars”; for a journey of billions years – Hello??

Without personalising this article, the scientific musing on the matter is that “we” here on Earth could build such a powerful transmitter. It would be a reflector with a diameter twice the size of planet Earth (did you get that) and would need to be water cooled (and that too). As if this whole matter wasn’t humorous enough. So we are going to laud these geniuses for their contribution to mankind’s services. It is an appalling disgrace upon humankind that such lunacy even gets to see the light of day on a scrap piece of paper let alone be internationally reported!

Am I contrite about lampooning Harvard University Astrophysics Department, or even the Astrophysical Journal and the Telegraph for publishing this uninspiring drivel? Hmp!

Let me cut to the chase.

God created the heavens and the Earth and from our best advices this commenced about 14 billion years ago. After some 10 billion years and as part of the continued outworking of God's creation, planet Earth solidified from being a mega gas and dust cloud and our planet was formed in company with its planetary siblings and the Sun star. (The Book of Genesis 1:1-2)

The purpose of God's creation is not a random act. It was a very intricate and a beyond-human-concept plan to create an environment in which humans could choose to undertake service to God undergirded by their inward faith that He would provide a spiritual refuge for eternity as a reward for their conviction and commitment to holy service within His Kingdom. It is nominally called Salvation.

There is no mention of alien or any other terrestrial type life forms in the Bible. There is only planet Earth. All other solar bodies, planetary formations and galaxies across the universe are all there in a subservient role to planet earth.

Gen 1:14 And God said, Let there be lights in the firmament of the heaven to divide the day from the night; and let them be for signs, and for seasons, and for days, and years:

Gen 1:15 And let them be for lights in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth: and it was so.

Gen 1:16 *And God made two great lights; the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night: he made the stars also.

Gen 1:17 And God set them in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth,

Gen 1:18 And to rule over the day and over the night, and to divide the light from the darkness: and God saw that it was good.

The history of mankind is wrapped intrinsically together with the universe and all that is within it. This is not a planetaryscape where the salesman says, "Location-location-location" to the best bidder. We only have planet Earth. There is no other alien life out there despite the whims and wishes of some very prominent UK physicists who lamented the fact that we don't even have a protocol for when we meet an alien.

Science does not want you to know the facts about other life forms in the universe. That is "any" life form whether we call it alien or bacterial or fossil or elemental indicators. And let me be absolutely unequivocal and unambiguous about this. Science has not discovered, or seen, or found, or produced one shred of evidence that alien life forms exist in the universe. Everything that you may have read about alien existence and all that has been proffered on this subject by Science is fiction solely based on very dubious speculation. And that is the truth.

So what are you going to do now? I can tell you that I for one refuse to watch Scifi movies of aliens. I remonstrate at the very notion of having this rubbish shoved into the faces of the general societal view in the name of Science-Fiction. It is nothing to do with science and the mainstream professionals of these scientific disciplines should be shutting these fantasy seekers down. They are pedlars of an anti-God attitude that by a back-handed slap are contributing to the great fall away of mankind from Godly service.

General society does not see that they are being proselytised into the anti-God religion of worshipping the science-fiction lie and are being subliminally duped into railing against the God of all Creation. Good luck with that charge of aiding and abetting when you get to stand before the Great White Throne on Judgment Day.

I will say it again. This is a disgrace.

So, do you now want to know what I really think?
