

The Futility of Mankind to Determine His Own Eternal Destiny

Jeremiah knew it very well – vanity, and this article spells out that a life lived in the fast lane of a Godless pursuit of money, power and worldly pleasures is on a road headed straight for the destruction of everything that it is.

There is no reincarnation when we die, there is no coming back to life as some other form of creature, and when we die in a Godless state everything is destroyed including our souls; like soap suds down a drain hole – gurgle-glug-gone.

There is a message here for Christian workers as well, including those that might be a bit smug about it all.

Geoff Rooke