

The Christian Church's Challenge to Address Homosexuality

Introduction

If ever there was a vexing issue for the churches in our time it would have to be how to deal with homosexual relationships occurring within its congregants and its office bearers.

Whilst the bible scriptures are very clear on the issue, is there a case for homosexual couples to be embraced into the congregations and permitted to marry within the churches?

There needs to be a great deal of compassion when dealing with this issue and this article addresses what action should be taken.

Geoff Rooke